Johns Hopkins University cannot issue a Certificate of Eligibility unless a student has provided a signed statement indicating that you can meet all of the financial obligations of your graduate study.

Personal funds must be documented by original bank statements, certificates, and letters from government agencies or institutions providing financial support to the student. When requesting official documentation students should ask for two original documents, one for the embassy and one to be submitted to OISSS. A letter from a family member does not constitute documented evidence.

The estimated 12-month cost of graduate study at Johns Hopkins University for 2009 – 2010 is:

Tuition	$39,150
Matriculation Fee (one-time)	$500
Room & Board (estimated)	$16,000
Health Insurance (estimated)	$1,677
Personal Expenses	$600
Books/Supplies	$1,200
Total	$59,127
Expenses for Each Dependent	$3,500
Travel Expenses	$1,600

---

Directions: Graduate students need to complete lines (2), (3) and (4) on this form indicating the specific source and exact amount available to cover their first year of study. Figures should reflect if the student will be accompanied by a dependent (a dependent is a spouse or a child). Department administrators complete the rest of the form.

A departmental fellowship/assistantship in the amount of $_____ (completed by department) has been awarded to _____ for graduate study at Johns Hopkins University and is considered a part of his/her statement of financial resources. The amount of the award is shown in line (1).
